

JENNIFER GOULD KEIL

REAL ESTATE

GIMME SHELTER

Karen Katz is selling her Fifth Ave. co-op

By Jennifer Gould Keil

October 15, 2014 | 5:44pm

Karen Katz.

Photo: Victor J. Blue/Bloomberg

Karen Katz, the CEO of Neiman Marcus, is selling her prewar co-op at tony 930 Fifth Ave., an Emory Roth-designed building where Woody Allen once occupied the penthouse.

The $3.15 million two-bedroom, two-bathroom co-op comes with furniture — though it can also be purchased without.

Recently renovated, the home includes oversized windows and a living room with a side view of Central Park, and a “beautiful faux fireplace.”

Sliding glass doors open to the second bedroom/library that includes an alcoved office space. There’s also an eat-in chef’s kitchen and a large pantry.

The listing brokers are Reba Miller and Julia Cole, of RP Miller Realty Group.

FILED UNDER

GIMME SHELTER, JENNIFER GOULD KEIL, NEIMAN MARCUS, REAL ESTATE

7 ways the...

YOU MIGHT ALSO LIKE

20 Hot Celebs You Didn't Know Are Jewish

Styleblazer

Mansions Left Abandoned For Years, Guess Who They Belong To...

ViralWorld

'The New York Nobody Knows'

Learnist

How to bleed a radiator and other energy saving tips

Netmums

6 One Pot Rice Dishes You'll Wish You Knew About Before

SimplyCook Blog

Make the Most of Your Small Bathroom

Plumbworld Blog - Bathroom Ideas | Bathroom Inspiration | News

Promoted Content by

The 100 Most Basic Movies: #100-81

'The Walking Dead' Recap: A Man's Gotta Eat

SEE ALL

TRENDING NOW

Soccer player dies after celebrating goal with flip

Central Park's brawling bike vendors

Woman gets stuck in chimney of man she dated

NBC reporter's job in doubt after breaking Ebola quarantine to get takeout

Letterman's cue-card guy fired after argument, assault...

A toxic president

Twins separated at birth reveal their incredible...

The ugly reason the Jets got Harvin...

